Welcome to my classroom

Cheryl O'Neil is happy to have a classroom of her own — even if that means setting up in the boys' locker room at J.D. Hodgson Elementary School in Haliburton. The new French teacher is beginning her career under some interesting circumstances, thanks to construction delays at Minden's elementary school. Teachers and staff were busy last week getting ready for the new school year which begins today. They've been setting up make-shift classrooms in church halls, the Minden Community Centre and the J.D.H. gymnasium. Classes will be held at these locations while work continues on the Archie Stouffer Elementary School addition. The school is expected to be ready for the students' return by early October.

And they're off

Six-horse show promises no yawns in federal run

by Russ Duhaime

Local voters are in for one of the most interesting federal elections in more than three decades.

Bill Scott's absence and Dennis Drainville's presence guarantee that the campaign in the Victoria-Haliburton riding will not be a yawn.

Scott, who represented this riding for 27 years, turned this into the first real election in decades when he announced his retirement from politics.

Drainville, who has earned a roguish reputation at the provincial level, promises to add a whole new dimension to the federal campaign with his involvement as an independent.

Add this to an already lengthy slate of credible candidates and we're virtually guaranteed an inspired fight. There will be no ducking the issues, no riding on the coattails of the party leaders, and most importantly, no sure bets on the results.

Prime Minister Kim Campbell is today expected to announce an election for October 25. The campaign, however, is already well underway in this riding with five candidates in the running and another soon to be selected.

Drainville, who has completed just over half a term as the riding's provincial member, is the latest to throw his name into the hat. He will run against Lorne Chester (PC), Barry Devolin (Ref), John O'Reilly (Lib) and Cathy Vanio (NDP).

The newly formed National Party is also expected to enter a candidate in this riding, which means the ballot will carry at least six names.

Here's a brief look at the candidates:

NEW DEMOCRAT: Cathy Vanio joined the race on Aug. 19 with a narrow margin of victory in the NDP nomination. She represented the New Democrats in the last federal election, when she placed third with 17 per cent of the vote behind Scott and the Liberal candidate. The former social worker lives in Omemee.

CONSERVATIVE: Lorne Chester, the former mayor of Lindsay, easily was the hands-down winner in his party's nomination. His strong community involvement in the Lindsay area, including 15 years on town council, make him a formidable opponent in the riding's main population centre. The Lindsay lawyer has been campaigning for several weeks. He was in Minden last Thursday to open a campaign office.

LIBERAL: John O'Reilly also has an impressive record of community service in the Lindsay area, which includes service on town council. He is an associate broker with a real estate company in Lindsay. His campaign has been in gear for a few weeks.

REFORM: Barry Devolin won his party's nomination in October. He is a former PC member and was Art Ward's campaign manager when he ran for provincial office. Devolin is a real estate agent in Haliburton. His campaign is surprisingly quiet to this point.

NATIONAL PARTY: This fledgling party will be selecting a candidate for this riding on Sept. 13. Marvin Rabjohn, a retired air force officer who lives in Omemee, appears to be the leading candidate.

INDEPENDENT: Dennis Drainville, a former provincial New Democrat, has made waves at Queen's Park since his election to office almost three years ago. Disenchanted with the NDP, he left to sit as an independent, where he continued his opposition to several government initiatives — most notably the casino gambling proposal. He has also made strides towards government reforms to allow for greater participation from elected members.

Co-ordinator to kick start economy

Haliburton County's stalled economy will be getting a kick start with its new economic development co-ordinator.

Ryan Brown brings a wealth of experience and successes to the county as he begins work under the federal Community Futures program.

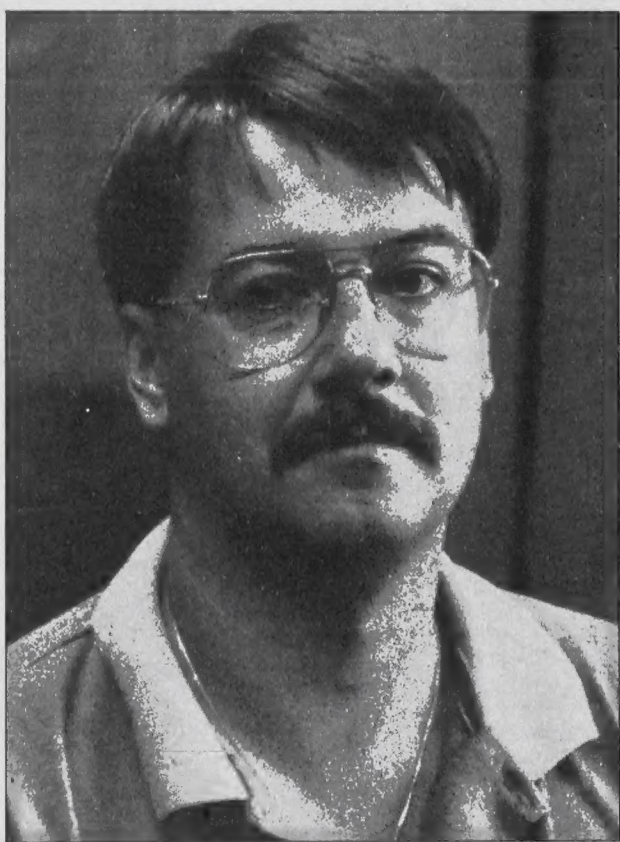

Brown was hired by the local Futures committee and began work in his quarters at the Haliburton County Development Corporation in Haliburton village.

The Futures committee is a relatively new group, which is chaired by county warden Chris Hodgson. The committee began its work several months ago with a series of brain-storming meetings designed to spotlight areas of potential economic growth in the community.

The meetings spawned a report on development potential, which Brown will be using as a framework.

Brown says the purpose of the Futures program is to help economically stressed communities reduce their reliance on government aid.

Brown will be working closely with the committee, the two BIAs, the county's economic development committee and the chamber of commerce. He says his main function is as a catalyst to keep good initiatives on track. There's generally lots of enthusiasm behind good ideas at first, but it tends to dwindle as time passes and the idea is put on the back burner. "My job is to keep it on the front burner."

Ryan Brown will help build local economy

An important ingredient to success is in presenting a united front to upper-tier government when applying for assistance for projects. Brown hopes this can be accomplished by working closely with the various organizations involved in marketing and development of the county. "There's a lot of people with a lot of good ideas. I bring them together in one place to put forth a unified voice to the province and feds."

Brown has been involved in the field of economic development for the past 12 years. Most recently, he worked as the Economic Development Officer for Wa Wa, where his efforts resulted in a variety of achievements for the community. Most noteworthy is his work in attracting a new industry to the area, which will employ 400 people when it's up and running.

Industry may or may not be the best route to take in this county, but Brown is confident he can help this area pull itself out of its economic slump. By enhancing the community's infrastructures -- better roads, schools, hospitals, etc., -- he says the area will become a more attractive location for potential new businesses. "If we make Haliburton County a wonderful place to live, others will find it a wonderful place to live and they'll locate their business here."

Youth learns boating safety the hard way

by Russ Duhaime

A young vacationer learned a hard lesson in boating safety last Tuesday when he attempted to swim to shore after his boat ran out of gas on Halls Lake.

It was only by chance that Kevin Hicks escaped unharmed from a life-threatening situation. Jim Skinner happened to be watching as the youth jumped from his powerless boat in the middle of the lake and he set the wheels in motion for a rescue.

Halls Lake resident Thelda McGuire said it was after 8 p.m. when Skinner came knocking at her door. Since she was the closest neighbour with a boat, she was recruited to go look for the boy. In turn, she recruited Bob Flemming to come along.

"It was a comedy of errors," said McGuire. "It was so dark we could hardly see," she said. Her own boat was full of water from an earlier rain and they had to take the time to bail it out. Meanwhile, the boy, who was about 12 or 13 years old, continued to swim away from his own boat and into the darkness.

McGuire said she was a bit frightened about what they might find out on the lake. They eventually reached the empty boat but the boy was nowhere to be seen. They shut off their motor and McGuire began to call out across the darkened waters. Off in the distance they could barely make out the white splashing water as they boy tried to signal to them.

Hicks was frightened, cold and tired when his rescuers arrived, but otherwise he was fine. McGuire and Flemming brought him back to his cottage and then went back for the boat.

The boy was wearing a life jacket during his ordeal, but that was about the only thing he did right. He was out at night in a boat with no lights, no paddles and no signalling device. After the motor stalled, the inexperienced boater panicked by abandoning the relative safety of his boat and attempting a long swim to shore.

"I don't think he would have made it to shore," said McGuire. He was very tired and he still had a long way to go when help arrived. He had been in the water for more than half an hour and was still out in the middle of the lake. "It was just lucky that Jim spotted the boat," she said.

The water temperature at this time of the year is comfortable for swimming, but McGuire says it is very easy to get disoriented on the water at night. She said she even lost her way in the dark while returning to her own cottage that night. She said the incident might have been a tragedy if the boy had not been spotted.

Legion Branch 636 in Minden has a new slate of officers. Those chosen for the job are (front) Lloyd Johnson, Lois Adamson (president) Don Holden, (second row) Sharon Sykes, Dave McAdam, Cliff Green, (third row) John Sykes, Syd Adamson, Bud Murray, (back) Ken Walsh, Peter Overington and Maurice Winterlood.

Diversion is key for county in waste management plan

by Andy Holloway

The county will no longer look at opening new landfill sites because it has become too expensive and time consuming.

The county's waste management committee chairman Ross Rabjohn said Haliburton can not afford to begin the costly and time-consuming site selection process that other areas have undertaken.

"It's not right that municipalities should spend a million dollars and have nothing to show for it in the end because it was blocked by a few people," said Rabjohn.

In what county planner Mark Stagg called a "pivotal decision", the steering committee met last Thursday to reaffirm its position that the county should look into ways diverting waste away from landfill sites, namely a plan that emphasizes the 3Rs (reuse, recycle, and reduce) and a county-wide tipping fee schedule.

Composting and tipping fees have been the environmental rage recently as most municipalities in the county have dump cards to regulate access into their dump sites. However, this does not stop people from illegally entering the sites, particularly in an area like Dorset which divides Muskoka and Haliburton, said Rabjohn.

A recent county report on tipping fees recommended a county-wide fee schedule to discourage cross-township dumping and encourage people to find alternative means of reducing their consumption.

During the past four meetings of the steering committee, Rabjohn says a few people have attended and all are supportive of the proposals.

It would seem other areas have found this out too, but the hard way. Rabjohn recently attended a waste management meeting in Trenton that saw eight groups discuss how to get more dump space. The one basic flaw many found with the current route to getting a new landfill site is that the province wants public consultation at all stages of the process. Yet, no one shows up to the meetings until the final stages when the sites are announced and then they protest against the decision. The process becomes stalled and the municipality has wasted taxpayers' money.

With municipalities being squeezed by increasing tax arrears and declining provincial grants, small townships can not afford to proceed with waste management options without full county cooperation. Recently a proposed hazardous waste removal day was cancelled because the county's ten governments could not all come up with even $500 to cover costs.

In any case, Rabjohn says it would be even more expensive to find a landfill site in Haliburton because of the rocky and porous soils. This means an engineered site would have to be developed which is beyond the means of a small county like Haliburton.

Rabjohn says the steering committee wants the county to proceed slowly and cooperatively pooling all the township's resources together. However, he added that the county is so large that what is good for Cardiff may not be good for Sherborne so that a north/south dividing line should be looked at for the purposes of waste management.

He said the county should have all the alternatives to look at by Christmas time so that when the budget comes, up the county has all the information it needs.

In more positive news the recent mining of the Dorset landfill site was a complete success. The municipality was able to add two, perhaps even four, years to the life of the dump with just two weeks of mining, says Rabjohn. The sand used to cover the garbage at the dump was filtered out of the site creating a huge hole in the corner that can now be refilled. The sand was stockpiled for later use.

August weather

Another good month to end the summer

by Phil Graham

August has come and gone, but it has been a great month. Hope everyone is happy with the summer weather which has been the best we've had for some time.

The average temperature was much above last August and the rainfall average was much less than last August as well. We had very heavy rain on August 20 and lots of thunderstorms. There were nine days with thunderstorms, some of them quite severe.

River water temperature was much above last August so there was lots of swimming up to the end of the month. Last August there was no swimming and no urge!

Norland swimmers return to beach

by Jerry Grozelle

The municipal beach at Norland on Shadow Lake was posted as unsafe for swimming for about a week and a half at the end of August.

The swimming area is scheduled to be tested 10 times (about once a week) throughout the summer. The area is tested more often if samples are found to exceed the safety limits.

Water samples taken in late August indicated that the E. Coli bacteria count exceeded the safety standard of 100 E. coli per 100 milligrams of water.

The warning signs were removed on September 2 after two consecutive samples tested at around 60-70 per 100 ml.

"It has returned to what I would call normal," said Doug Shelton, chief health inspector with the Hali-burton Kawartha Pine Ridge District Health Unit in Lindsay.

E. coli bacteria is an indication of animal or human waste in the water.

Shelton said that he didn't know what caused the high levels of the bacteria.

"It very well could have been the low flow through of water, (combined with) the hot weather, turning to cooler nights," Shelton said.

"If we had any reports of (septic) systems that are leaching into the water or people dumping illegally we would investigate," he added. "But at this point we have had no complaints of that sort."

People who swim in water that exceeds the safe limits of bacteria risk eye, ear or nose infection through contact or if water with a higher than acceptable E. coli content is ingested, the result can be stomach cramps and diarrhea.

"It can affect different people in different ways or it may not have any effect at all," Shelton said.

This was the first time the Norland beach was posted this season. It was posted once last season for two or three days at the beginning of August.

Counting of E. coli bacteria only goes up to 600/100 millilitres. Shelton said that there is no point in going any higher than that level because that is well over the limit and there is really no point in wasting lab time counting any higher. The count at the Norland swimming area was below the 600 mark although it did peak in the 300-500/100 ml. range.

The beach at Coboconk was posted at the same time but Shelton said he didn't think there was any reason for concern that the Gull River system was polluted.

Shelton points out that the signs are just a warning.

"We're not out there to stop people from going in if they want to swim," he said. "Basically, it's a warning that the area is unsafe for swimming purposes. We wouldn't swim there, let's put it that way."

Still planning for community cops

by Jerry Grozelle

It may be a month or two before the Ontario Provincial Police have a community policing office in Kilmount but both the municipality and the OPP are optimistic that it will happen.

Representatives from the Coboconk OPP and Somerville Township met at the old township office in Kilmount last week. The purpose of the meeting was to determine what would have to be done to the building to make it suitable for a community policing office.

"Basically, we just went over the building to see what was required to get it in shape," said Somerville deputy-clerk Mike Rutter.

Some cleaning on the outside and a few modifications on the inside are all that are required.

"It's not all that bad, other than some cosmetic changes on both the outside and inside," Rutter said. "I think everyone was pleasantly surprised."

Rutter said that he is sure that council is prepared to go ahead and do whatever is required (as far as buying the materials is concerned) to renovate the building to make it suitable, as long as the cost isn't an astronomical amount.

Several members of the community have said that they are willing to provide free labour to complete the renovations.

From the OPP standpoint, Sergeant Al DeChamp says he is in the process of preparing a report to be submitted to officials at the OPP Headquarters in Orillia.

DeChamp added negotiations are still under way with township officials.

"Hopefully it will be a go," he said. "The committee was over and viewed it (the old township office)," DeChamp said. "We talked about the requirements and they (the township) seem to be in agreement."

No definite target date has been set for the opening.

"Until the higher-ups agree with my report, I can't really say anything definite," DeChamp concluded.

MPP resigns Drainville eyes federal seat

by Russ Duhaime

Voters in Haliburton and Victoria Counties have two elections on the horizon thanks to Dennis Drainville's resignation from provincial office.

Drainville announced last week that he is resigning his seat as an independent member of provincial parliament so he can run in the coming federal election. He says there will be a later by-election to fill his vacancy at Queen's Park.

Drainville's interest in federal politics is based on the belief that economic recovery is in the hands of the federal government. He says most of the decision made at the provincial level depend on how the federal government leads the economy. "All the province can do to help the economy is to react to decisions at the federal level."

Interest rates, the GST and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade have had "a profound impact on Ontario and Victoria Haliburton," he notes. "We had absolutely no say in any of that."

Drainville is in the middle of his first term at Queen's Park. He was elected under the NDP banner, but grew disenchanted with the rigid discipline of the governing party and left to sit as an independent member. In this capacity, he was able to freely oppose certain government initiatives, particularly the casino gambling legislation. He was also an active proponent for government reforms that would allow members to be involved in the decision-making process.

The candidate says he will continue his fight for reform in federal parliament if elected. He is steering clear of party affiliations in this, choosing instead to run as an independent.

Drainville says he had toyed with the idea of running federally, but felt satisfied with his work at Queen's Park. However, he says was later persuaded by his supporters to give the federal race a shot.

"I'm not going to run a flash campaign," says the independent candidate. Drainville's independent status means he does not have the financial support that comes with party affiliations. He says he expects to spend about $30,000 on his campaign and half of that will come out of his own pocket. Candidates are allowed to spend up to $63,000 on their campaigns.

The reputation he has earned as an outspoken member of the provincial legislature provides Drainville with a high profile in the riding. "We're not talking about a person who's unknown in this riding," he said last Wednesday. "I don't think there are very many people who don't know I'm running." Still, he is not anticipating an easy victory over his five opponents. "It's not going to be a cake walk."

Leaving his provincial seat to run for the federal seat is a risk worth taking, says Drainville. "If I have a flaw, it's that I'm an idealist." If he had chosen not to run, he says he would have "felt a sense of failure that I had not done to the utmost of my ability the things that I could have done."

County Warden Chris Hodgson

Warden seeks PC nod

Haliburton County Warden Chris Hodgson has his eye on Dennis Drainville's soon-to-be-vacant seat at Queen's Park.

Hodgson says he hopes to carry the Progressive Conservative banner if a provincial by-election is called here.

Drainville, MPP for Victoria Haliburton, has announced he will be resigning the seat in order to run in the federal election. He anticipates a by-election will be called, probably coinciding with a by-election in the riding of Essex South.

Drainville, a former New Democrat, says Premier Bob Rae will probably run the two by-elections at the same time "so the bad news comes together."

Except to confirm his intention of seeking the PC nomination, Hodgson is keeping quiet until Drainville's resignation is official.

Case goes Countrywide in realty

Case Real Estate has been bought by Doug Johnson and John Mulder and will operate under the name Countrywide Haliburton Realty Ltd.

The changeover officially began today (Tuesday) when the Minden Main Street office was opened.

Jointly, Johnson and Mulder have served in the Minden/Haliburton region for over 10 years and are now opening their own real estate brokerage.

Both Johnson and Mulder expressed their excitement about becoming part of Countrywide, an all-Canadian real estate network based in Mississauga. With a sales force of 10 people they are already planning to expand from their present location within the next year. They say they are looking forward to developing Countrywide Haliburton into a major presence in the area.

Countrywide International has franchises across Canada including 54,000 sales associates. It also offers an in-house mortgage program and a home warranty program.

"I couldn't find more committed and professional people than Doug Johnson and John Mulder," said President and C.E.O. of Countrywide International Tom Morrissey.

Time for leadership

Bill Scott, Member of Parliament for Victoria-Haliburton, took his final ride in the Kinmount Fair Parade Saturday, closing out his political career with the smile and wave that has helped keep him in office for 27 years. This may not have been Scott's last appearance in the parade, but it will be his last as the federal member for this riding. His final term will come to a close this week when the Prime Minister calls an October election. The Kinmount native is not running in this election.

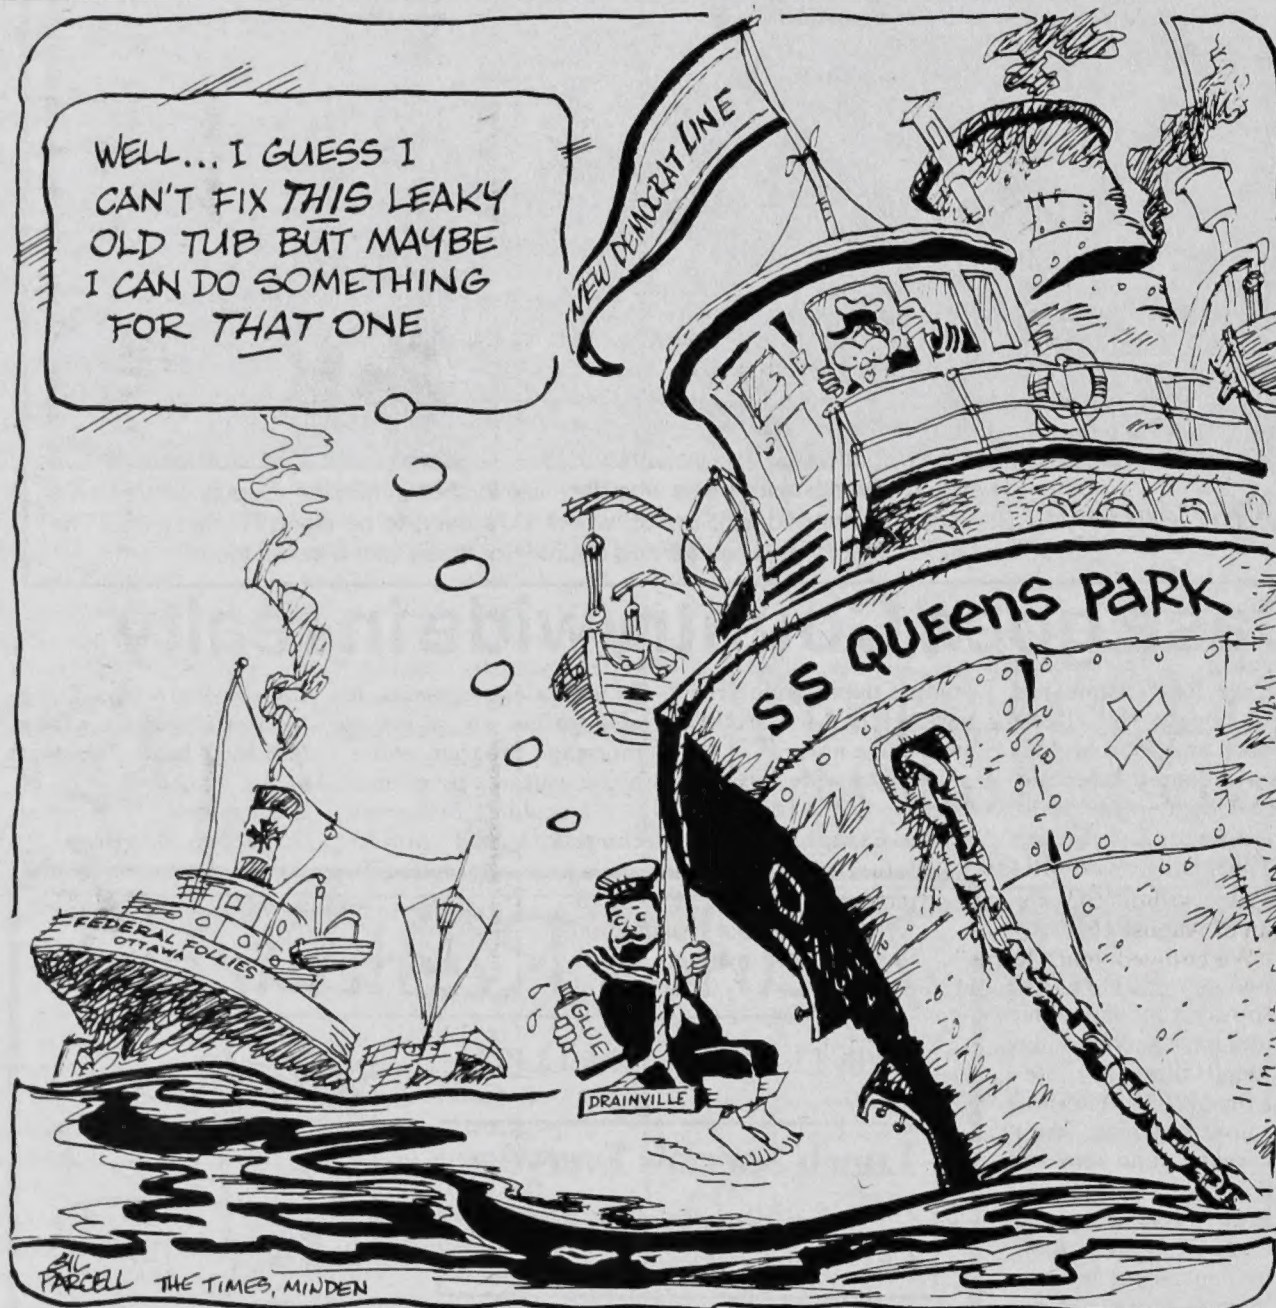

Scott's retirement comes at an appropriate time in the evolution of the democratic process in Canada. His compliant style of representation is no longer acceptable to residents, who are demanding -- and deserving of -- a greater say in how our country is run. People, particularly in this riding, are becoming aware of how little input their elected member has in the decision-making process at the federal and provincial levels and they want a change.

The question, however, remains: how do we determine who will provide this change when candidates tie themselves so firmly to their respective parties in their bids to win the election? The election hasn't even been called and it's already clear that some of the candidates are attempting to hitch a ride to office on the coattails of their leaders. Instead of talking about their personal accomplishments, beliefs and aspirations, the candidates are showering us with canned copy direct from party headquarters.

This sort of information is of value, but it should not be the sole basis of a decision on election day. The community needs to know what style of representation it will be getting. Will the candidate sheepishly adhere to the party line or will he or she fight for the needs of his or her constituents? What are the candidates' priorities: the wishes of the party, personal convictions, or the combined will of the constituency?

Over the next few weeks, The Times will attempt to address these questions with its election coverage. We don't really care who has the most colourful balloons at their campaign offices or who has the loudest bands at their rallies. We're not as concerned with party rhetoric as we are with the leadership abilities of our candidates. What we want to know is who will best represent this constituency.

We're fortunate here in Victoria-Haliburton to have a good selection of high-calibre candidates in the running. Now we need to weed out the followers from the leaders. We have to determine which of the candidates has the right combination of intelligence, determination and backbone to represent this constituency. We do not want a puppet whose strings are controlled from the front benches of Parliament.

Canada's National Party leader should be given same chances

Editor:

I object to the exclusion of Mel Hurtig, Leader of the National Party of Canada, from the CBC candidate debate. If you are going to include the Bloc Quebecois, whose message would break apart this great country, then you must include The National Party of Canada, whose message is to unite and strengthen Canada.

The "conglomerate" media has managed to keep the message of the National Party out of the public eye by ignoring its existence. But, the Canadian-owned CBC has a responsibility to keep the public informed of all its legitimate choices.

Canadians wish to make responsible choices. Canadians are frustrated and fed-up with the old-line political parties. Canadians deserve to know the whole story. I urge the CBC to include Mel Hurtig in the debate, and let the voters decide!

Master keys needed for safety reasons

Editor:

I am writing this letter because we have a family member living at 55 Parkside Drive.

We have found that there is no master key or individual apartment keys kept by the management. We understand that this is a problem for them, as residents have a right to their privacy. Also, who would keep the keys is a problem. However, perhaps there could be a solution to this situation.

What if there were to be a fire in one of the apartments with a locked door, or some other kind of emergency? It would be up to the resident to try to get out. If they were unable, firefighter or ambulance crews would somehow have to get them out in time. Possibly, if the family lived close enough, they could somehow help, but not all residents have family living near.

It is our concern that one day there might be a tragedy at the apartments, one that may be able to be avoided.

We hope that all of the residents will be safe, and there will never be a distressing incident in which someone would die or be seriously injured. The whole town of Minden would mourn a tragedy like this.

Black's dog Rufus a joy to hear a tale about

Editor:

Re: Arthur Black's column of August 16.

We enjoyed your "Rufus" story very much. Our best pal has the same thoughts on a perfect day as your best bud.

Only a suggestion as to the barking and rattling the rafters. It's probably too late to change this habit, but in the future and to anyone with a puppy this suggestion is offered. Puppies are like children, they are born innocent and the end result is your doing (or undoing). To quote, "Nip it in the bud" is the best policy.

Bill Scott's farewell fair

Dumb crooks with even dumber plans

Is it a bigger crime to rob a bank or to open one?

A chap by the name of Ted Allen wrote the above. I think Mister Allen had his thumb squarely on one of the elusive characteristics of crime: its chameleon-like ability to pass itself off as something else.

When you think about it, it's really rather remarkable that so many people take up a life of crime, considering there are so many legal ways to be dishonest. We live in a time when political bumboys who have weaseled their way into a Senate appointment cynically vote themselves a massive pay raise smack in the face of a recession-ravaged populace. We live in a time when a roundly reviled departing Prime Minister cynically attempts to sell his used furniture back to the very people who paid for it in the first place.

If you can get away with scams like that legally — who needs to break the law?

Still, break the law we do. Some of us at any rate. And it is the inept and ham-handed ways in which we break the law that offer if nothing more, some comic relief for the rest of the Great Unwashed that continue to plod the Straight and Narrow.

Take, for instance, the case of Eugene "Butch" Flenough, Jr. of Austin, Texas. Eugene, down to his last five bucks, decided to knock over a pizza joint late one evening. Cleverly enough, Eugene

Black 'n White

by Arthur Black

reasoned that since there were several members of the staff still on the premises, it might be a good idea to conceal his identity. Accordingly, he donned his motorcycle helmet, complete with tinted visor, burst through the door, ordered everybody up against the wall, cleaned out the till and fled.

Imagine Eugene's surprise when the Texas Rangers where practically at his door to greet him when he got home. The Rangers told him he had been positively identified by several staff members. Impossible, thought Eugene "Butch" Flenough, Jr. How could anyone identify me when I was wearing my motorcycle helmet with the tinted visor?

And so he was — the one with "Eugene 'Butch' Flenough, Jr." neatly stencilled across the front.

Eugene was plain dumb. Daniel Wakefield was Dumb Squared. Wakefield walked into a bank in Pretoria, South Africa last year with a gun in one hand and a canvas bag in the other.

He was wearing a mask — which, cleverly enough, did not have his name stencilled on it. Wakefield threw the bag at a teller, and told her to fill it with folding money. She did. Wakefield fled. So far, so good — for Wakefield at any rate.

But 50 minutes later a bare-faced Dan Wakefield shows up in the same bank. "He was still wearing the same clothes and carrying the same bag" testified one of the tellers. "We all recognized him the minute he walked in and we called the police."

By the time Wakefield arrived at the tellers wicket, detectives were sidling up to him from every quarter of the compass. Blithely, Wakefield emptied the $4,212 he'd stolen on the counter and chirped "I'd like to open an account."

Say goodnight, Mister Wakefield.

Dumb — but not dumb enough to hold a dunce cap to William Saunders of New York. In February, Saunders stormed into an office of AT & T in Manhattan, armed to the teeth and threatening mayhem. He took 14 hostages. Police cordoned off the building. SWAT units slipped into position on rooftops and in adjacent offices.

Fortunately, 13 of the hostages managed to escape on their own. How? They asked Saunders — one at a time — for permission to go and get a drink of water. They never returned. Saunders eventually surrendered to police.

How come I never get to play poker with guys like William Saunders?

People lament about the rise in crime. I say Thank the Gods for Dumb Crooks. Imagine the shape we'd be in if they were as wily as our politicians.

Rotary student finds Danish school fun

Dav from Denmark!! Hi to all of the residents of Minden.

In case none of you know me, I am the Rotary International Exchange student for the Minden Rotary Club this year.

I came to Denmark six weeks ago, and am living in a town just a little bigger than Minden on the west coast of Denmark.

For the first two weeks I was in Denmark, I lived in a city called Ringsted, about 40 minutes from Kobenhavn, the capital of Denmark. Along with 103 other Rotary exchange students, I lived at a "Landbrugskole" (Agricultural school) for 15 days and tried to learn the basis of Danish. Students were there from Canada, USA, Mexico, Belgium and China. We lived in a dormitory type setting and went to school.

I learned common phrases like "My name is ...," "I

Dav from Denmark

by Meaghan Obee

come from ...," "I am 16 years old," "I do not speak Danish," "I do not understand." I also met some of the most incredible people in the world there who were all in the same situation of leaving home for a year, and I got to know them all very well.

On July 29, everyone went to their respective host families and got settled in before school started. I live with a family of five at an "Efterskole". My father is the headmaster of the school and my mother teaches Danish and English. I have a 20-year-old sister, Tina, a 19-year-old sister Winnie, and a 13-year-old brother, Rune. Tina lives about 30 minutes from here with her fiancée and Winnie is traveling around Europe on a scooter right now with her best friend. My family is truly incredible. They are kind, patient, and understanding. No matter how much I mess up my Danish, they are always willing to help me try to learn more and correct my mistakes.

School in Denmark always begins the first week of August. It usually starts at 8 a.m. and runs until around 3 p.m. My school is about 20 minutes from here by train and has 300 students.

There are three grades at the "Gymnasium": 1g, 2g and 3g. I am in the 2g which is probably the best place for an exchange student. I take math, English, Danish, French, history, geography, science and gym. I have 28 classes a week which are all 45 minutes long.

There are also two lines of study in the Danish system. There is the math line and a language line. As an exchange student, you are not given the opportunity to choose what line you are in. I am in the language line. My class has 27 students, 23 of which are female!

School is quite fun and a great learning experience. Having to speak Danish to all of the students and teachers, I learn lots.

As for my Danish skills, I am constantly learning new words and phrases and am tonnes better than I was when I left language school, but I am by no means fluent yet. On average, it takes five or six months to learn the language fluently, but I am hoping to have it by the end of October.

Denmark's food is quite different from Canadian food, but I really like it. They eat three meals a day, like us, but instead of snacking whenever you feel like it, you have "tea" twice a day. "Tea" is tea, juice, coffee, and cakes or danishes. For the first couple of weeks, it was really hard to stop from eating lots of the danishes, because they tasted so good, but after a while you get used to it and only eat small amounts every day.

Here, the weather in summer is quite similar to our fall. Quite cool (it hasn't been over 20 degrees here yet!), breezy, and very rainy. In the whole six weeks here, I have only had six days where it hasn't rained at least once. Almost no one here has a tan, and if they do it is from a solarium.

Well, that is about all that I can tell you for now. I am thoroughly enjoying my stay, like school and fit in well with my family. Danish people are very accommodating and easy to get along with.

I'll be sure to write again soon to keep you informed of all that is happening here in Denmark.

Jan Haedicke scores three in big win over Raiders

For the second game in a row Haliburton Westside Jug City's offence had a great game, scoring five second-half goals to rout the Bond Head Raiders 5-0 in Muskoka District soccer action.

Leading the way for home-side Haliburton was Jan Haedicke who scored three times and now has nine on the season. Haedicke scored three goals early in the second half to break a scoreless tie and send Haliburton to their second straight win. Darren Parsons and Hans Walter, the team's leading scorer, later scored as well.

Haliburton sits in eighth place with 16 points, just one back of both the Parry Sound Strikers and Midland North Stars. However, Orillia sits in ninth spot with 15 points and has three games in hand.

With just two games left in the season Haliburton could finish as high as sixth or as low as 10th. Playoffs start September 26 and Haliburton is in tough to grab a good spot for the post-season round.

At the top of the standings there was little change. The Collingwood Lakers retained top spot with a 2-2 tie against the Huntsville Strikers who continue to sit in second spot.

Haliburton played Sunday afternoon, but the result was not available at press time, and will play their final game this Sunday at the high school.

Standings are on page 12.

Young Guns

The rough and tumble game of lob-ball seems to have taken its toll on some of the players in Minden's adult recreational league. Not to worry, though, there are usually plenty of younger players just waiting on the sidelines for an opportunity to swing a bat. Last Wednesday's action saw several kids filling in on the diamonds and many of them were able to outwit the adults.

Lack of money kills waste removal day

by Andy Holloway

Hazardous household waste materials will have to sit a while longer in your basement because of a disagreement between municipalities on who should foot the bill.

The county had been trying to set up a hazardous waste removal day for this fall with each of the 10 municipalities kicking in $500 to cover the cost. While municipalities like Stanhope agreed completely with the idea, others like Dysart did not, despite the fact the program was around $30,000 less than other programs cited by the province.

Dysart councillors said they did not want to pay $500 since they were also asked to provide the site and a supervisor for the event. Council suggested they provide the site and either pay $200 or supply a supervisor.

County planner Mark Stagg said other municipalities could not afford to pay the $500 fee as they were already scraping the bottom of the budget barrel.

Despite the lack of cooperation, Stagg said the need for such a household hazardous waste removal day is still great.

"There's obviously a need for residents for a proper approved way to get rid of these wastes, otherwise where are they going to put this material," said Stagg.

Hazardous materials like pesticides and paints can not be accepted by landfill sites. Townships knowingly allowing such materials to be dumped in their landfill sites can be subject to heavy fines by the Ministry of the Environment.

Still, if a person throws it away in a green plastic bag there is no way for the attendant to know. The material can then leach out of the site and into the groundwater, becoming a hazard to human health and the environment.

The spokesman hopes to set up a waste removal day in the spring, giving municipalities ample time to work out their differences.

The low cost of the program was due to the fact that the county cut out some of the more obscure hazardous wastes and concentrated on popular items like paints and thinners said Sherborne Reeve Ross Rabjohn. He estimated about 90 per cent of all the household hazardous materials would have been covered by the plan.

Still, the low price was too much for some municipalities to handle, especially in light of high tax arrears and reduced provincial grants said Rabjohn.

On August 21st the Minden Royals baseball teams journeyed to Toronto to attend a Blue Jays' baseball game at the skydome.

National Party starts out small

Marvin Rabjohn announces riding candidacy before just 17 people

by Andy Holloway

He's fed up and wants to do something about it.

And so Marvin Rabjohn has declared himself a candidate for the National Party of Canada's in the upcoming election. Rabjohn announced his intention to run for the Victoria-Haliburton riding at a public meeting held last Thursday at the Dysart Community Centre.

Fighting for attention with the sound of slapshots ringing off the hockey boards below, Rabjohn, who was also battling a cold, spoke quietly about his personal political beliefs and the need for change which forced him to run for political office for the first time. "I don't have to do this, I've got to do this."

Like many of the 17 people who turned out to the meeting Rabjohn said he felt completely disenfranchised by the current major political parties, but was willing to try to change the system with the party's Canadians First campaign.

Also, like most of those present, Rabjohn is middle-aged, white and retired. Rabjohn is 57-years-old and spent 25 years in the air force before retiring. He is married, has two children and four grand-children and lives just outside of Omeme.

However, despite his age Rabjohn shook things up when he was asked whether he had ever smoked marijuana. Trotting out the party line of honesty, integrity and openness (although he had a bit of trouble remembering the third ideal) Rabjohn admitted he had smoked, and in fact, inhaled, the illegal weed.

He then went on to support the idea of decriminalizing marijuana and allowing farmers to grow hemp to turn into products like clothes, paper and rope.

The National Party is still in its formative stages. Despite the fact the election date is less than two months away, Rabjohn seemed unsure of the policies of his party. This was perhaps understandable as the party mainly has principles in place. The candidate did promise those in attendance the party would have published policies in the next week or so.

A candidate nomination meeting has been set for next Monday in Fenelon Falls, but Rabjohn seems the likely choice.

Following Rabjohn was Greg Gogan, a provincial organizer and likely candidate for a Toronto riding. Speaking with the conviction of a converted preacher Gogan said the National Party is the only alternative to the main three parties because the Reform Party leaves out Quebec and the Bloc Quebecois leaves out the rest of Canada.

A young, forceful speaker Gogan was active and energetic throughout his speech, rattling off party ideals and the problems facing the country with ease. At times he was reminiscent of Tony Robbins the motivational speaker who appears on television infomercials.

The most intriguing idea Gogan spoke about was his intention, if elected, to set up a Citizens' Advisory Council which would keep him in touch with the mood of the community. The council would be composed of non-partisan volunteers elected by the community. When pressed for details on how he would accomplish such a task Gogan said he did not know, only that it would happen.

Still, when the party passed around two popcorn buckets for contributions most of them did so willingly, putting in a loonie or two.

And while Gogan's prediction that thousands of people would soon be attending National Party meetings was perhaps a bit optimistic, he and Rabjohn seemed to have struck a responsive chord with those present at the Haliburton meeting.

KINMOUNT FAIR

A THRILLING LABOUR DAY RIDE

Traffic was backed up for miles in all directions around Kinmount Saturday morning as another fabulous fair parade wound its way along Highway 121 across the bridge and into the crowded fair grounds.

Thousands of people turned out for the end-of-summer event to drink in the excitement, scents and sounds of the area's largest and oldest fair. The carnival atmosphere of this enormous exhibition overshadowed the agricultural aspect of the three-day extravaganza, but no one seemed to mind. There were enough rides, games, attractions and live entertainment to suit all tastes.

The weather, much like most of this summer, was ideal. The skies threatened rain Saturday morning, but the clouds soon passed, giving way to a comfortably warm day during which to enjoy the activity.

The sights and sounds of the bustling Kinmount Fairgrounds blend together as the carousel takes its passengers for a ride.

New minister inspired by rugged terrain

by Andy Holloway

"The Lord works in mysterious ways and it seems He wanted us to be here."

That's how Peter Walford-Davis describes how he came to be head minister at the area's three United Churches located in Minden, Maple Lake and Carnarvon after serving 28 years in various other Ontario communities.

During the mid-1970s Walford-Davis and his family spent a week vacationing at a campsite in the Minden area with some friends. Little did he realize he would return to the area to live and work, but that's what has happened since July 1 when he returned here, this time for what will probably be a longer stay than his one week trip.

Walford-Davis has been a minister since 1966 when he started his first job in Picton in Prince Edward County. From there he made stops in Cobden and Port Elgin before returning to Picton where he stayed for 12 years. While happy on the island, Walford-Davis moved to Minden when asked by the United Church congregation still seeking a minister to replace the popular Reverend Ed Moll who left the previous summer. The church has little to say about where it's members practice says Walford-Davis.

"If you feel it's time for a change you can initiate it or if you've been there for a while and feel it's time to move on."

The thing about Minden that stuck in Walford-Davis' mind was the ruggedness of the surrounding area. Prince Edward County, he says, has gentle rolling hills whereas Haliburton County is rugged and each little town seems to be carved out of the wilderness. There is a pioneer spirit present as well, which Walford-Davis has noticed even among the three churches he serves. Each feels it can exist independently of the others. However, he says his concern is getting all three together and feel like one.

All three will come together to mark the covenanting service which officially installs Walford-Davis in Minden on September 12 at 7:30 p.m. He says the formal ceremony is like "a wedding between the pastoral charge congregation and the minister."

Walford-Davis' wife Barbara and their son Andrew will be at the ceremony as well. Barbara and Peter recently celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary. All three members of the family were active in the Picton community. Barbara was a softball coach, sang in the choir and was on several committees and boards. Andrew, who will be attending Haliburton Highlands Secondary School, was also involved in the softball league.

"They're the athletic ones, and I'm just the opposite," says Walford-Davis who lists model railroads and cast-iron cars among his hobbies.

Another of his hobbies judging by the amount of experience he has, seems to be the media. Walford-Davis has been involved in radio, television, newspaper and theatre work. During his stay in Cobden he was on a Pembroke radio station where he did all kinds of programming including interviews, religion, Broadway and nostalgia. While in Port Elgin he had his own television show which in 1977 won a production award for the station's class.

Topics tackled on the show included a positive look at nuclear energy in Bruce County and religion.

In addition, Walford-Davis was a religious education teacher in Prince Edward County for 11 years. He taught grades 1 to 8 giving each class a 20 minute seminar every Friday. After the province passed a bill that stopped the teaching of just one faith to the exclusion of others, Walford-Davis developed a course called World Religions and Morals and Values which was accepted by the local school board. The course allowed the teaching of different faiths and emphasized what he calls the "basic tenets" of all religions such as being honest and not stealing.

His experience in education should be a blessing since the basement of the Minden United Church will become a temporary school for the month of September. "Hearing the sounds of students downstairs will be almost nostalgic," says Walford-Davis who will not be teaching this year, but may give a proposal to the school board for next year.

In the meantime, there are other programs to be developed, but that can't be done until Walford-Davis can get out more often to visit the community and see what the needs are. One program that is being started up is a skills workshop to teach the people the skills they need to do some of the visiting chores that fall onto a church minister, particularly during the winter months when getting out can be tricky for many of the county's elderly.

The traditional slow-down after Labour Day will provide Walford-Davis with a chance to do all that plus unpack a few more of the boxes which remain unopened since the move from Picton.

The busy summer has also curtailed some of the exploring of the county. "The whole area is brand spanking new to us so there's lots still to see."

One thing he has encountered, Walford-Davis says, is the friendliness of the people here. So far he says the people have been welcoming and warm, not that it is any different in Picton, but it's nice to be welcome.

Concert raises hope for battered women

The realization of a women's shelter for Haliburton County will be a little closer after Ken Whitely performs for a crowd at Medley's Dance Hall on September 18.

Whitely, one of Canada's best performing artists, will anchor a line-up of local talent that is sure to please the audience at the benefit concert in Carnarvon. A big supporter of the Women's Safety Network's plan to build a shelter here, Whitely enthusiastically agreed to a request from Zoe Chilco to be a part of the concert.

Leading off the evening on the stage will be four local performances. Kris Kadwell and Friends, Glenda Burke, Steve Badger and The Shoop Group who will provide a variety of musical styles to suit most listeners.

The Saturday evening event is the third concert organized to raise funds for a women's shelter. Chilco said about 150 people turned out to the first concert two years ago. Last year's concert drew an audience of about 180. This year, with Whitely headlining, she is expecting a full house in the hall above the bowling lanes.

Whitely has been called a "playing encyclopaedia" for his vast repertoire. He has a strong command of a wide variety of styles, including swing, blues and gospel. His musical career goes back to 1965 and his work covers more than 80 recordings, numerous television and radio appearances and a long string of live performances.

Whitely has produced more than 30 children's albums, including seven Raffi records. He has twice been nominated for Juno awards and has earned critical acclaim across North America. His range, though, extends well beyond children's music. He has performed with such greats as Blind John Davis, Roosevelt Sykes, John Hammond and made a Saturday Night Live appearance with Leon Redbone. He has also programmed three successful Mariposa Folk Festivals.

The goal of building a women's shelter here is just getting off the ground, said Chilco. She said the need for such a facility has been identified in this county and these concerts are providing some of the root funding to get the project off the drawing table. Currently, women who need the security of a shelter must go to Bracebridge or Lindsay, which often means the additional hardship of uprooting children from their schools to move out of the community.

The concert begins at 8 p.m. in the hall at the corner of Highways 35 and 118. Tickets are $10 and can be purchased at posted locations in Minden, Haliburton and Carnarvon. Seniors, students and unemployed pay only $5 for their tickets.

Man takes bat to neighbours over property dispute

by Andy Holloway

A Toronto psychologist has been charged with several offences after hitting his neighbour with a baseball bat during a boundary dispute at his Boshkung Lake property.

Minden OPP say a long-standing dispute over a right of way took a nasty turn on August 27 when the man's neighbours were surveying the property line. Tony Aymong and Carol Moffatt were cutting some trees branches to better define the property line. The man approached the pair with a baseball bat, upset with the surveying and branch cutting.

A 1990 Toyota four-wheel-drive truck belonging to Aymong was dented and a rear window, a side mirror and lights were smashed. Damage to the truck was estimated at about $4,000. A surveyor's transmit worth about $2,000 and a camera worth $200 were also smashed.

Aymong was hit on the upper right arm during the dispute. No other injuries were reported.

Following an investigation by police, Dr. Peter Marton was charged with possessing a dangerous weapon, assault with a weapon, mischief over $1,000 and assault.

He appeared before a Justice of the Peace and was released on a $2,500 surety. He is scheduled to appear in Minden court on September 15.

VON offers foot care clinic

Victorian Order of Nurses announced today it will introduce an In-Home Foot Care Service in Haliburton County this month.

The service is available by appointment only. Nurses who specialize in foot care will visit clients in their homes to provide services such as nail trimming, corn and callous care, general health and foot assessment. The cost of the service is $18.

VON operates six foot care clinics in the county — monthly in Haliburton and Minden (2) and every other month in Cardiff, Wilberforce and Dorset.

Anyone wishing to enquire about the service or book an appointment can call toll free 1-800-267-2905.

Waterways Report

On Monday, August 23, the stored water averaged 69.8 per cent of maximum in the Haliburton area lakes of the Trent-Severn Waterway. This represented a 4.5 per cent decline from the previous Monday and was about 1.5 per cent below that in 1992.

Flows from the reservoirs continued near their long term averages, while the Otonabee flow from the Kawarthas was reduced due to the lack of surplus. The Kawarthas averaged just at their respective navigation full levels by August 27.

Lake Simcoe-Couchiching appears to be into a slow decline, but still averages six or seven cm above its rule curve for the date. Its outflow has been increased to about 32 m³/s (cubic metres per second), a little more than the August average of 26.7 m³/s.

Fair parade takes the calm away from Saturday

Usually we are quiet on Saturdays, but this Saturday, due to the Haliburton County Fair, we were very active since we were entrants in the fair parade. I have told before how much work is involved in just getting the residents on the bus. It never is the same. It varies according to who chooses to go. After many hold ups the bus was ready to join the parade. Our theme was Aladdin's Lamp. Our central figure was Judy Stevenson in her wheelchair, as Aladdin coming out of the lamp. Her friend pushed the wheelchair. The genies were dressed in rich flowing gowns. We took our place on the grounds and had our lunch in front of the grandstand while the opening of the fair was in progress. At this time the poem the residents composed was read by one of the organizers of the fair.

We are very appreciative and honoured to receive so many prizes for our parade entry. First prize - Judy Stevenson (best adult outfit); Second prize - Lynn Shirley (best adult outfit); Third prize - best decorated float.

The residents truly appreciate everyone who did such a good job of taking care of us.

Sunday Estella Burch came to read for us. She finished the book she had been reading. Thank you greatly Estella. Sunday evening Chapel service was conducted by Rev. John Burgess with organ music by June Mason. Thank you both, Rev. Burgess and June.

Monday afternoon we watched two video tapes. One was of the bus in the fair and the second was the Christmas party we had in 1988. It brought back memories.

In the evening Andrea and Shandy came to help oversee three or four tables of cards. We sincerely thank them for their help.

Tuesday Chapel service was taken by Louise Leonard. The residents thank her greatly. Later we had crafts and in the evening Corinne Arsenault came so those who wished could play a few games of cards. Thank you Corinne.

Wednesday afternoon Doris took some of the residents for a bus ride on the road to old Blairhampton. I was away for a couple of days so didn't get the names of the volunteers. I know the residents thank you.

Thursday the ladies from the Kinmount Catholic Church hosted our regular Thursday tea party. They provided a delicious tea. Thanks to all the ladies who gave us such a nice afternoon.

Congratulations to Vera Archer who celebrated her birthday August 25, 1993. Happy birthday and many more.

At lunch on Friday the tickets were drawn for the winners of the hams. The winners were Linda Fry, Lilian Harrison, Sylvia Sisson and Peter Ryan (if Mr. Ryan won, the ham was to go to Mary McKelvey).

Happy Hour was held Friday with music provided by Bill Payne, Eldon Deacon, Don Burch and Don White. The residents truly thank them for entertaining them. They also thank those who tended to our needs.

The residents of Hyland Crest are pleased to welcome a new resident, Cyrille deLang to our home.

Mixing science and economy

Last week, geneticists gathered in Birmingham, England for the 17th International Congress of Genetics. At meetings like this, they get to meet colleagues, hear some of the megastars, check out the coming talent and learn about the latest ideas.

Although I'm no longer an active scientist, I still get enormous vicarious pleasure at these meetings. Experiments and procedures I never imagined I'd live to see, are now used routinely.

Today, geneticists isolate specific segments of DNA from an organism, modify them in test tubes, then insert them into a different species. "This can now be done with any species on Earth," one speaker told us.

From many species, geneticists are compiling libraries of sequences of codes in DNA, the fundamental blueprint of life. It takes six BILLION DNA letters to transform a fertilized human egg into a person.

Deciphering this genetic "archive" have been called the "Holy Grail" of molecular biology and the objective of an international multi-billion dollar effort called the Human Genome Project.

Already the resulting outpouring of information is leading to molecular models for diseases like cystic fibrosis, Huntington's chorea and Duchenne's muscular dystrophy. And in less than a year after the first human trial, gene therapy is now being tried on several different inherited diseases.

So it's not surprising that geneticists are exuberant and bullish about the potential benefits of this explosion in knowledge. They point out how their discipline will relieve suffering and elevate the quality of people's lives. M.S. Swaminathan is the father of the Green Revolution in India which more than doubled per hectare production between 1965 and 1989. But seven hundred million people (of which 200 million are children) are still undernourished he told us, and world population will increase by another 4-5 billion in the coming decades.

Richard Flavell, is a British molecular biologist who believes genetic engineering will provide the increased food yields the world will need. Creation of plant stocks through traditional selection and breeding of mutations, has now been superseded by the astonishing ability to design strains by moving segments of DNA in and out of cells, thus bypassing sexual transmission and species barriers altogether.

For example, Flavell described how a gene from bacteria that produces a protein toxic to insects was identified, isolated and inserted into tomatoes, corn, potatoes and cotton. The engineered plants were resistant to insect pests.

Genes conferring resistance to virus infections or fixing nitrogen from the air have been similarly manipulated. Such molecular techniques are already being used in over 40 common types of fruit and vegetable plants. It is a revolution with enormous potential. But in extolling the numerous benefits of their work, many scientists overlook the fact that real

Reflections

by David Suzuki

solutions to global problems are usually not scientific but economic, social and political. Before the symposium on conserving global genetic diversity, the chairperson pointed out that since private biotechnology companies had financed the congress, delegates should visit the commercial exhibits to show their support. MONEY is now the driving force behind much of the work being done and money will determine the kind of work pursued and the beneficiaries.

What Flavell didn't point out is that while the explosion in human numbers gives urgency to his work, most of that increase will occur in the very countries that can least afford it.

Swaminathan reminded us of the grotesque inequity of distribution of world wealth — we the richest 20 per cent, possess 82.7 per cent, the next 20 per cent have 11.7 per cent, and the rest are left a paltry 5.6 per cent!

One of the major health problems in the rich countries is overeating, while the poorest one billion people cannot even afford a subsistence diet. Flavell even suggested that most of the genetic diversity in crops of the future will be generated by molecular biologists in the lab. Impressive as this work is, I disagree with him.

The raw material from which will be derived the designer DNA, ideas and possibilities, will remain the vast diversity that exists in nature. No matter how clever we are, the scale of our ignorance will continue to be vastly greater and that raises another issue.

Many pharmaceutical and food companies are beginning to exploit knowledge accumulated by indigenous people about plants for medicines, nutrition and pest control. But there are no legal mechanisms to recognize, protect and compensate indigenous intellectual property.

When an active ingredient is isolated from a species known to act as a contraceptive, insecticide or antibiotic, the "discovery" can be patented even though it is based on knowledge long used by indigenous people. Companies have to recover the costs of their investment we are told, but won't this just be another rip-off of the poor by the rich countries?

Scientists deserve to be proud and excited about what they are doing and discovering. But in announcing the benefits of their work, they must address the social, political and economic repercussions. Maybe they'll do so in five years at the next Congress of Genetics.

HEART AND STROKE FOUNDATION OF ONTARIO

Improving your odds against Canada's
#1 killer

Here's the good news about stroke!

The best line of defence for any healthy person is an annual blood pressure check. Many strokes can be prevented if high blood pressure, a leading cause of stroke, is controlled through early diagnosis and prompt treatment.

In fact, stroke-related deaths have been decreasing, especially in recent years. Since 1980, deaths from stroke have declined by approximately five percent a year, largely due to the effective treatment of high blood pressure.

Today the outlook for every stroke patient is brighter because of the advances in diagnosis and medical treatment, as well as improved rehabilitation.

For more information on blood pressure or stroke, contact your local office of the Heart and Stroke Foundation of Ontario.

CARDS OF THANKS

Sincere thanks to all my friends who sent flowers, cards, phone calls & gifts and visited me in hospital and since coming home, for the excellent care I received from the nurses on the 4th floor of St. Joseph's Hospital and from Dr. Meede. Special thanks to Fr. Brian Parker, Gordon Kerr & Moore Smith who visited me when I needed spiritual help. Also to my husband & children who were always there for me, God Bless.
